Notes:

- ❖ A maximum of 3 ENG courses may be creative writing workshops (ENG 613, 713, or 699 as a 'workshop')
- ❖ A maximum of 2 ENG 699 Directed Readings may be used in place of coursework
- ❖ Graduate Assistants are required to take English 605 in their first semester as part of their training to teach first year writing
- ❖ The 2 non-ENG courses should be related to the student's research interests. Students who have completed a graduate degree or who have done extensive work in a field outside of English may choose either to take these two additional courses within English or to take two courses outside of the department.
- ❖ At least two of these nine courses must relate to the intended, or likely subjects of the student's dissertation. Also, at least two of these nine courses (not necessarily the same as those relating to the dissertation) should bear directly upon the choice of each area examination subject. One course can serve for more than one area exam.
- ❖ PhD students planning to apply for academic positions on the MLA market are not advised to use undergraduate (400-level) classes to fulfill course requirements.
- ❖ To enroll in creative writing courses, students must obtain permission from the instructor
- ❖ Most English graduate courses are repeatable; check the UH Mānoa catalog course descriptions
